

Zambia is a vast African country, friendly and peaceful, that offers superb wildlife and cultural encounters; participating in a photo safari in Zambia is one of the most incredible experience in the world.

Landlocked in South-central Africa, it is one of the region's least travelled and most rewarding wilderness destinations.

Situated mainly on a seemingly endless plateau about 1200 meters above sea level, Zambia boasts the Zambezi River, Kafue River and Luangwa River as well as Victoria Falls one of the largest waterfalls in the world, shared with neighboring Zimbabwe.

Most of the country enjoys a mild, pleasant climate with the river valleys hotter and more humid and the North, in the region of Lake Tanganyika, tropical.

While Lusaka is the country's capital, Livingstone, just 10 km from the Victoria Falls, is the adventure capital, offering adrenalin activities on and around the Falls and the Zambezi River.

Regarding wildlife, Zambia offers impressive diversity as well as large concentrations and numbers, and some of the wildest and most remote game areas on the continent.

Walking safari was born and perfected in Zambia and now is considered as the best way to enjoy the rich flora and fauna of the country's 19 national parks.

Birdlife is particularly prolific, attracting birders from all over the world.

Kafue National Park is Zambia's oldest protected area and one of the largest park in Africa with 22,500 square kilometers.

The North-West sector, the Busanga Plains, is the most remote, wild and diverse with vast tracts of pristine wilderness.

The Busanga Plains are a vast grassland floodplain seasonally inundated dotted with isolated tree-islands while Busanga Swamps are a papyrus-dominated wetland.

In the South Lake Itzhi-Tezhi represents another major feature of the Kafue National Park; the Lunga River, Lufupa River and Kafue River are the major water courses that feed and drain the park and are lined with riverine forest and the landscape is further patterned with broad-leaved mambo woodland, open plains and island thickets.

The Lower Zambezi National Park is another stunning destination, it lies along the North-Western bank of the Zambezi River and around the river it is concentrated most wildlife.

The Lower Zambezi National Park is a unique place where you can go on game drives as well as canoe and river safari's, the Zambezi River flowing gently due to its subtle gradient, it is perfect for canoe trip or on board of a boat silently for the best wildlife viewing.

South Luangwa National Park lies in Eastern Zambia, it retains its essence of true wilderness with a concentration of animals that is one of the most dense in all of Africa.

The South Luangwa National Park combines open, grassy plains and mature, mesmerizing woodlands, crowned with the pristine, impressive Luangwa River.

Zambezi National Park is located in Zimbabwe, close to the Victoria Falls and the Zambezi River; until 1979 it was part of the Victoria Falls National Park, but it was later separated to allow the Victoria Falls town to expand to the river.

Kasanka National Park is one of the smallest National Parks in Zambia, near the border with the Democratic Republic of the Congo, but what it lacks in size it makes up in beauty and numbers; the Kasanka National Park is best known as being the home to the largest congregation of mammals in the world, the fruit bat.

Every year, between October and December, around 8 million straw-coloured fruit bats arrive from the nearby Congo to feed on the national park's abundant supply of musuku fruits in Bat Forest.

Bangweulu Swamps is a vast area of wilderness, covered in swamps and floodplains, it has an enchanting landscape that will leave you captivated by its unique environment, wildlife and character; the area is home to the rare shoebill stork which inhabits the grassy fringes of the wetlands.
